Continuous works for the restoration of damages to the Electricity Network in Northeastern Attica and in the area of Megara

The intensive works for the restoration of the damage caused by the fire to the electricity supply Network of Northern and Eastern Attica are still ongoing.

HEDNO's enhanced capacity, with more than 400 people and 140 vehicles, not including support staff, has managed to restore the electricity supply for more than 10,700 consumers out of a total of about 15,000 affected by the catastrophic fire that broke out yesterday.

It is estimated that by late evening electricity will be restored in 180 substations out of a total of 210 that were damaged.

Finally, as regards the area of Megara, HEDNO's crews are working hard to restore the existing damage and restore the electricity supply in the areas of Alepochori, Psatha, and Porto Germeno within the next few hours. They are supported by additional staff to respond to the active fire.
